FAIRHAVEN - MASSACHUSETTS

THE COLONIAL CLUB

The Colonial Club of Fairhaven was organized in 1912 from a nucleus consisting of the "Colonial Dames"—those who took part in the centennial celebration of the town, commemorating and becoming a part of its history.

With enthusiasm and energy, these ladies, most of them habitually concerned in the welfare of the community, readily grasped at such an opportunity to concentrate and condense thoughts, long prevalent in the town, of establishing a historical society. The inheritors of the reminiscences of a century had finally come to the propitious time to organize their efforts into a commune of kindred spirits.

Their hopes suddenly materialized into a definite and enthusiastic ideal, and in six years have developed into a society with over 200 members, domiciled at first in the old Academy building in an incomparable environment of historic interest.

Here, the ancestors of these people were taught their first and last school lessons for their life work, and their descendants are now taking up their precepts of the past, in the atmosphere of this ancient structure, which was standing in 1797.

This Academy became the property of H. H. Rogers, who moved it from its former location at the Southwest corner of the bridge entrance, to the grounds of the Rogers High School, where it now stands.

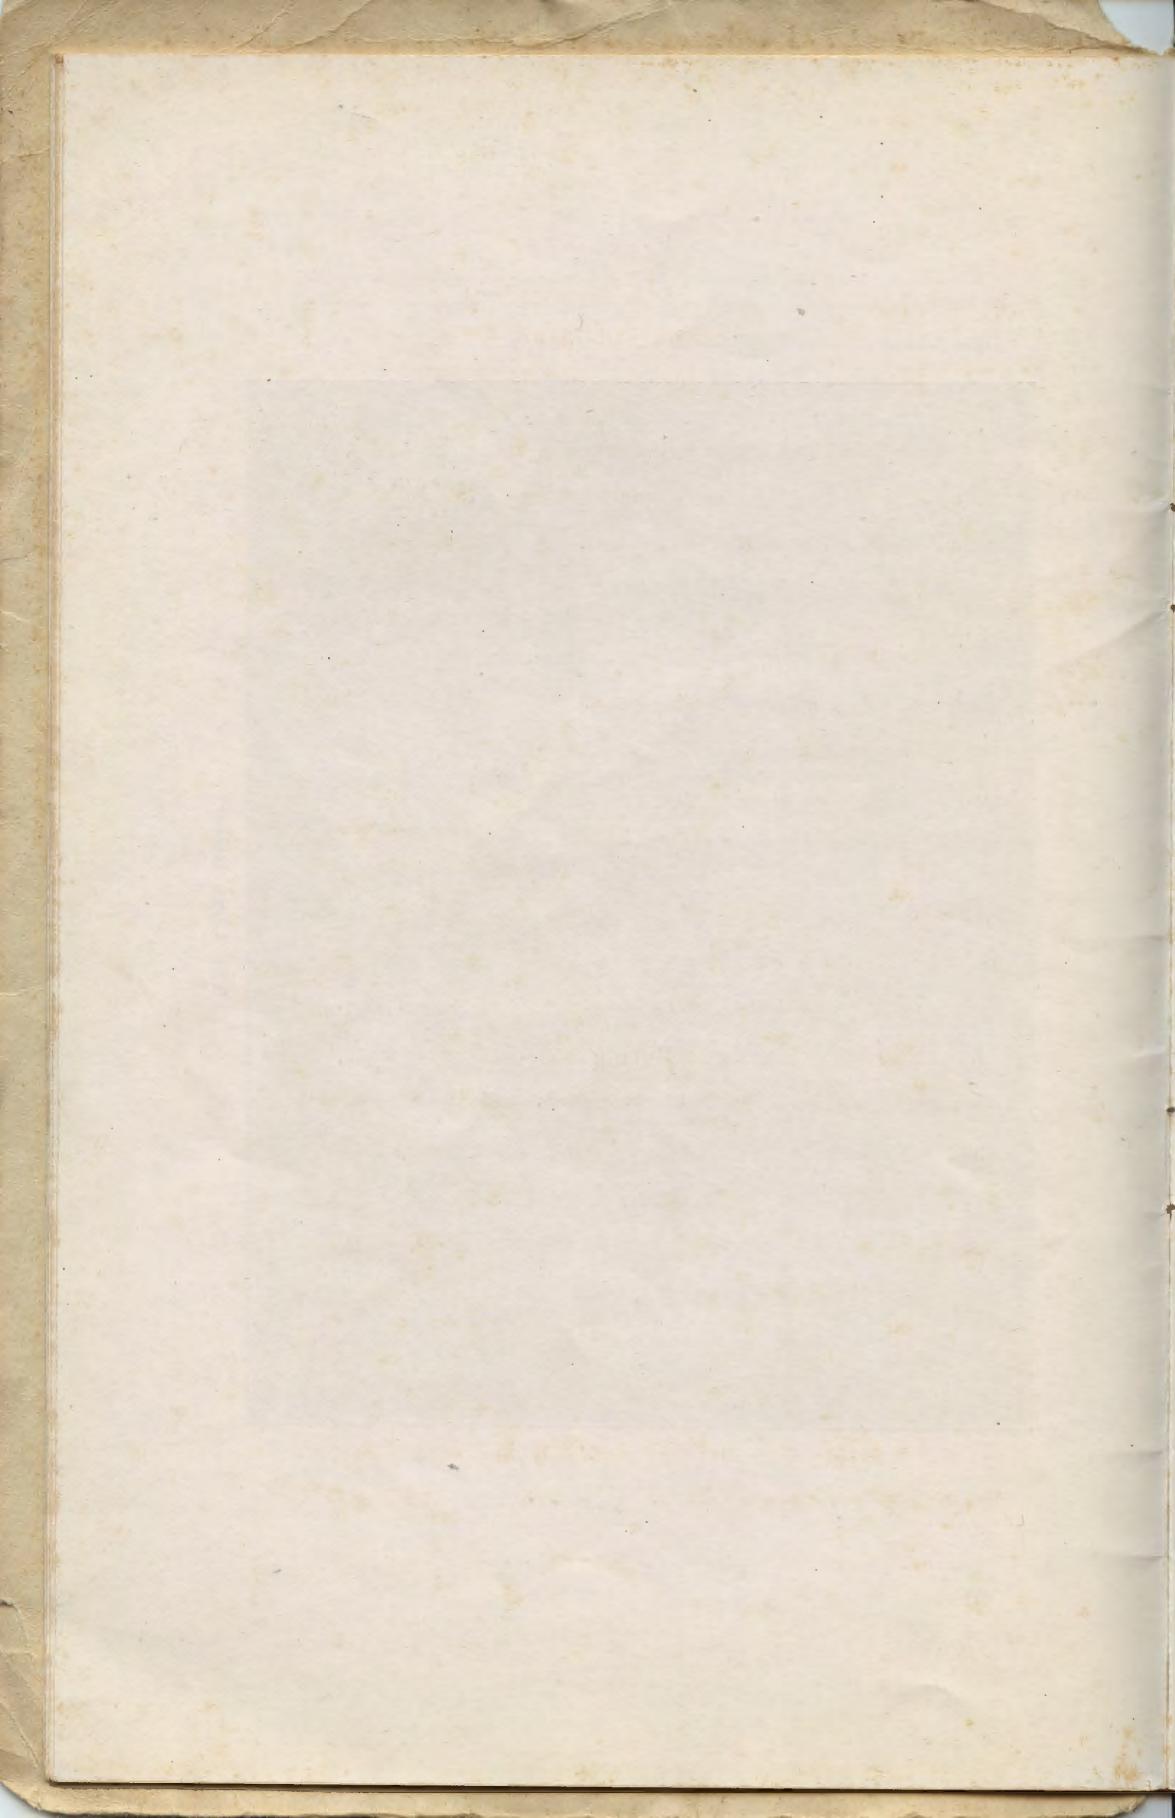

For many years the Academy in its old location, belonged to the Hawes family. The class room in the upper story long after the building had become obsolete as a school, was altered into a music and dance hall, by John A. Hawes, who at that time owned it, having inherited it from the Bordens, his mother being of that family.

A class room of the old school is still intact, with box seats, graded in size, on each side, rising in steps to the back. A narrow, open space divided them and led to the teacher's desk, which was of more importance in size and height.

The room not being large and the seats being closely arranged, the visitor can imagine the teacher on the high seat who there could so easily have an eye over all.

The Class Room

This room has every appearance of never having been disturbed by the vandal hands of those who chase time away in their perpetual desire to be but a type of to-day, to-morrow, and so on.

The old Academy is in the hands of the Colonial club, and has been affectionately cared for. Few alterations have been made except such as are consistent with the utility of its purpose.

The club from its beginning has prospered, and attained a conspicuous position, by its own energies, never being at a loss in acquiring funds to keep it on a substantial basis. By means of lawn fetes, card parties, and other entertainments during the six years since it was organized, the members have sustained the society in such necessary expenditures as have been incidental to accumulation and the general expenses of such a club, and besides have raised $1,500 for the alteration of their home, and still have funds in the treasury.

A special and eventful meeting was held by the Colonial Club, on the evening of July 3, 1916, at the society's museum in the old Academy building, for the purpose of acting upon the acceptance of a "deed of gift" of the house of the late Martha Coggeshall, a member of the club.

Mrs. Coggeshall, in her devoted interest for the society, by her last will and testament, chose to bequeath to it her homestead, consisting of land and a handsome house, with all its furnishings (which also includes a collection of antique furniture) with the free option of discarding whatsoever may be inappropriate and undesired for the purposes of the club. Provision is amply made for the upkeep of the house and grounds in the purposes designed, and for two caretakers, a man and a woman.

The only restriction placed upon the Colonial Club, is, that no funds are allowed to provide collations for its entertainments.

This gift, munificent and consistent for the purposes for which it is intended, provides a commodious social headquarters, from which location is a fine prospect overlooking the harbor and its shipping in the view to the South, limited only by the distant Elizabeth islands twenty miles away. A fine lawn extends to the water's edge. Hardly more could be desired for a pleasurable retreat, for the summer gatherings of the club, or better could not have been devised as an appropriate and thoughtful memorial.

Mrs. Coggeshall was a native of Fairhaven, and was always very much attached to it, and also to the friends of her youth. She was identified with all of the many interests of the town.

It had long been her desire, fully recognizing the Club's commendable purposes, to sometime help it in a substantial manner. She expressed a hope in her will that, inspired by this legacy, each native family of the town would contribute at least one gift to the club to accelerate the accumulation of family historical records.

This legacy has given a new impetus to the Colonial club. It has grown from 21 members to an association of over two hundred.

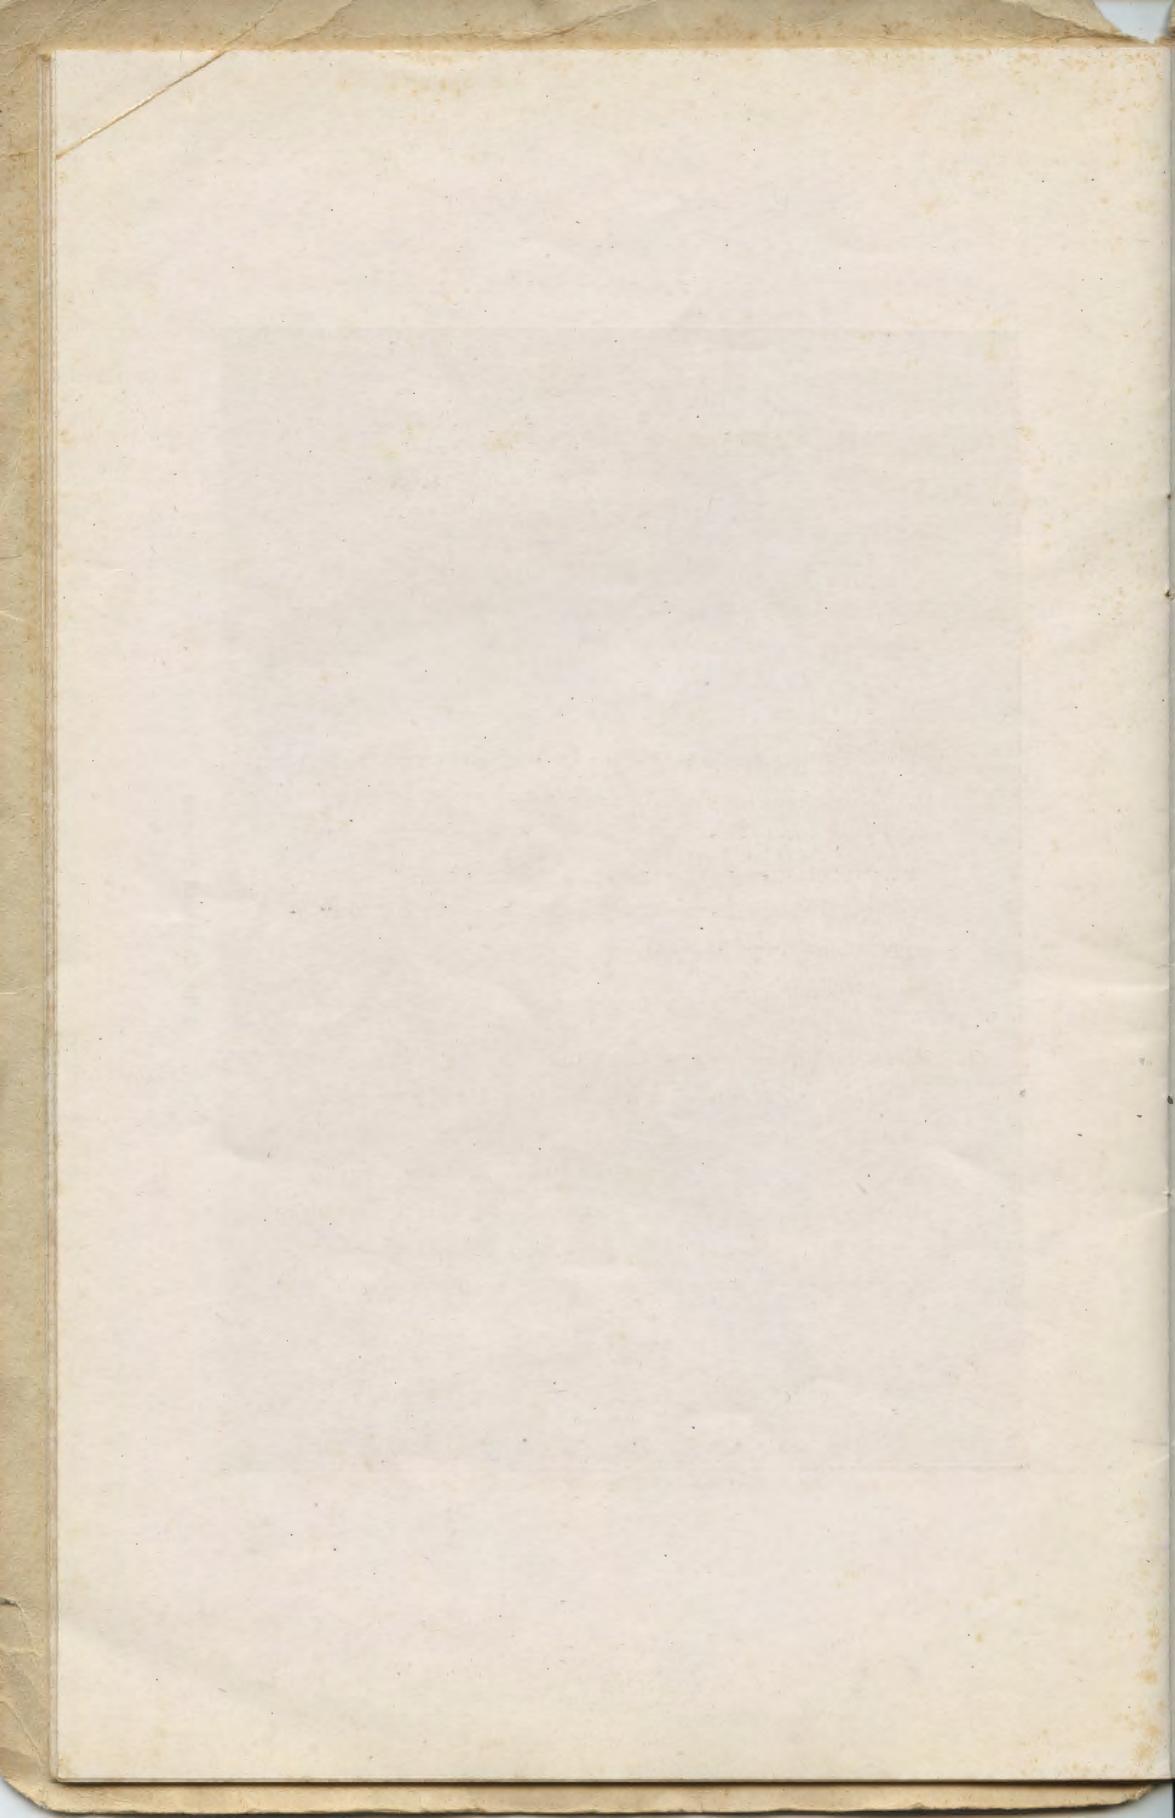

The Colonial club was formed through the suggestion of Lemuel D. Eldred.

The original Colonial Dames were as follows: Mrs. H. K. Nye, Mrs. Zenas Winsor, Mrs. Sarah Goodnow, Miss Emily Allen, Mrs. I. N. Babbit, Miss Helen Maxfield, Mrs.

Frank L. Wilde, Mrs. W. B. Studley, Mrs. George L. Hiller, Miss Susan Damon, Miss Mary E. Aiken, Mrs. Frank Blossom, Mrs. Frank H. Church, Miss Helen B. Copeland, Mrs. Sarah Jordan, Mrs. Henry B. Waldron, Mrs. C. L. Dunham, Miss Mabel L. Potter, Miss Maria F. Tripp, Mrs. E. G. Tallman and Mrs. George Hammond.
